The Ghosts Of Evolution: Nonsensical Fruit, Missing Partners, and Other Ecological Anachronisms by. Connie Barlow. 3.79 · Rating details · 193 ratings · 34 reviews A new vision is sweeping through ecological science: The dense web of dependencies that makes up an ecosystem has gained an added dimension—the dimension of time.

The Ghosts Of Evolution: Nonsensical Fruit, Missing ...

The Ghosts of Evolution is based on some very interesting observations, and the science cited is worth looking into. I would thoroughly recommend this to anyone who is seriously interested in evolutionary theory. On the downside the book does suffer from the fact that, while the idea is intriguing, it has been spread to thin.

Ghost Stories * * * We live on a continent of ghosts, their prehistoric presence hinted at by sweet-tasting pods of mesquite, honey locust, and monkey ear. —Paul Martin "I've got a screwy idea," wrote Dan Janzen in an October 1977 letter to a colleague. "Let's write a paper together.

The Ghosts of Evolution

In the altogether fascinating The Ghosts of Evolution: Nonsensical Fruit, Missing Partners, and Other Ecological Anachronisms (public library), popular science writer and evolutionary biology champion Connie Barlow builds on the work of renowned ecologists Dan Janzen and Paul Martin, who in 1982 published a provocative paper arguing that many of the fruits and nuts found in Central American ...

"The Botanical Ghosts of Evolution" by Connie Barlow a contribution in Forest Canopies edited by Bruce Rinker and Meg Lowman, 2004 Many plants, especially those in or beneath a dense and therefore wind-restricted canopy, depend on mobile animals not only for transferring pollen but also for dispersing seeds.

The Botanical Ghosts of Evolution

The premise of "Ghosts of Evolution" is that certain plants show traits that only appear logical if one presumes now-missing commensals - in this case, the vanished megafauna of North and South America. The original idea was proposed by Dan Janzen and Paul Martin in a famous paper co-authored in 1982.
